OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

A Debate in the House of Commons of which the Last has Not Been Heard.

Opposition to the Jesuits' Estate Bill—Where will the Matter End.

[From our own Correspondent.]

OTTAWA, Ont., March 30.—A debate which will furnish matter for discussion in the country for the next few years, and which will no doubt be made to do duty during the next general election, even if the Parliament does live its regular time, is a subject which is worthy of more than passing notice, and will furnish, I trust, interesting material for a letter to THE TIMES this week. My daily despatches would convey to your readers an idea of the intense interest manifested in the debate. But the excitement extends beyond the walls of the Dominion Legislature, and it is in the country, where the Third party intends operating, that we will next see the effect. What may be the outcome it is difficult to say. Some argue that it will all die out in a very short time, while others contend that so far as they can gauge the trend of public opinion, Ontario, at all events, is prepared, before acknowledging herself a slave in her demands, to insist on a revision of the constitution, even though the demand should put an end to confederation.

THE VOTE.

As I already wired you, the result of the vote was no criterion as to the wishes of the people. In the first place the resolution was so worded that no Liberal, favorable to Provincial rights, and opposed to the abuse of the veto power, could vote for it. Other clauses were equally bad. A straight resolution for disallowance would have more accurately told how the House stood. But this is not the reason for so small a vote. Party discipline with a view of catching the French vote was the main cause. The Liberals are making Quebec solid for them with the aid of Mr. Mercier. Sir John Macdonald—or Brother Macdonald—has got the Orange vote already. It stands to him through thick and thim, and has taken some mighty hard tasted doses even if wry faces were necessary. To disallow the bill would add no political strength to him from that quarter. To allow the measure was to once more ingratiate himself into the Quebecers favor. That course he pursued. Not only did he do this but out of fifteen members of the Orange order on his own side of the House, only four voted for O'Brien's resolution. Still better, he got Past Master Charlie Rykert to cast aside the red cloak of King William and appear in the garb of a Jesuit for over three hours on the floor of the Commons, defending the order and praising the Pope. A Senatorship was the fee demanded. Little John Small, M. P., of Toronto, the head centre of the agitation, stuck to the Government and his chances for the collectorship of customs at Toronto have doubly increased. And so I could go on ad libitum giving THE TIMES readers reasons for the very small vote in favor of disallowing the Jesuits' Estates Bill.

THE JESUIT ORDER.

Some two years ago the Society of Jesus was incorporated in the Dominion. The bill slipped through Parliament with very little notice—certainly no serious objection was offered it. It was, as one of its supporters said at the time, merely the incorporating of a Jesuit College. I think it was the Premier made that remark. At any rate they got their act of incorporation. When Mr. Mercier succeeded in defeating the Ross-Taillon Government in Quebec, the Roman Catholic Hierarchy were very much against him, as indeed it has been against all Liberals in Quebec for many years past. At one time to be a Rouge in Quebec was to be almost under the ban of excommunication by the Pope. The Riel agitation, however, could not be quelled even by the bishops and priests. On that popular French Canadian wave Mr. Mercier rode on to the treasury benches. To make himself solid with the church was one of his first steps. This he succeeded in doing in many instances, but the master stroke, from his way of thinking, was this Jesuit Estate Bill. He was knighted by the Pope and made a hero among the churches in the Province. He knew well that Sir John would not interfere if he did not court defeat. Thus it will be seen briefly how the measure, which has given so much dissatisfaction to a section of the community, came into existence, and will remain if the legal courts do not upset it.

THE SPEECHES.

The one great speech made in favor of Col. O'Brien's resolution was that of Mr. Dalton McCarthy, M. P. for North Simcoe. It was the best speech he ever made in the House. His legal argument against the bill was complete and almost irresistable, if not convincing. The House did not desire to be convinced. As a matter of fact Parliament is a very poor place to try a case. The decision is generally wrong. It is only the political complexion of the question that is caught sight of. But, as I have said, Mr. McCarthy made a strong speech, if he had left alone the latter portion of his remarks, which referred to the character of the Jesuits. This was the only part which the Minister of Justice, Sir John Thompson, fairly dealt with, and he threw ridicule on the whole debate by using it. For all that his speech was one of the most brilliant utterances ever delivered in Parliament. From the usual calm and judicial tone peculiarly his own, he ascended into what may be characterized as oratory, and his well rounded sentences and heavy periods made a telling effect on the House, and gave good excuse for those behind him to stick to their political colors. The other best speech was from Hon. David Mills, the best constitutional authority in the House. He supported the Government but not before showing the Premier that he had sinned grievously in disallowing Ontario's bills, Manitoba's railway charter and so on, and it would be quite consistent for him in the course he pursued if he disallowed the present bill. He argued, however, that the bill was constitutional, that it was ultra vires of the province, and that the matter was none of our funeral. If Mr. Mercier desired to throw away thousands of money and his supporters were in favor of it, then we, who live in Ontario, did not need to be any way interested. Our pockets did not suffer.

THE OBJECTIONABLE FEATURE.

There is little doubt but Mr. Mercier made the bill as objectionable as he could so that his victory over the Ottawa cabinet, with its two Orangemen, might be all the more complete. In the preamble of the bill it would appear from the wording that the Legislature was subservient to the Pope. In the bill itself was a clause that the money could not be paid and the measure would not become law until His Holiness had ratified the agreement. This was looked upon as giving power to a foreign citizen—if not a potentate—to say whether a provincial statute should or should not become law, and also to pronounce as to the distribution of public funds belonging to the province. In Sir John Thompson's mind this was all done, not in a legal sense, but in a spiritual sense, asking that both applicants belonged to the Roman Catholic church and under the spiritual direction of the Pope, who was merely to sit as arbitrator empowered to give a decision, and the parties concerned bend down, not legally, but spiritually, to accept that ratification, no matter what it might be.

STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

This confession by the Minister of Justice will have a startling effect on the community. We have been accustomed to think that the true prerogatives of the Crown were on the whole wisely and beneficently administered; and that all subjects of the Crown were bound to submit their rival claims to the executive or judicial authorities of the nation, and that such authorities were sufficient for all the purposes of a sovereign Government. To call in some foreign authority whom the Minister says can alone prevent the rival claimants "making any further claim," strikes a serious blow at and degrades the sovereignty of the nation as well as the status of the Crown. Rival claims to escheated estates have been dealt with by the Government and courts; and rival claims to church property belonging to the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies have been finally adjudged by our courts. But according to Sir John Thompson, rival claimants in the Roman Catholic Church cannot be finally bound by the ordinary executive and judicial authorities; they may ignore them and declare them incompetent, and claim the right to submit questions between its rival claimants and the Crown affecting escheated property and public money to a foreign tribunal or a foreign authority, under the title of a foreign sovereignty, when no such power is possessed by or could be validly granted to subjects of other denominations. Surely the law is founded on equal rights and equal justice to all, and allows no such revolutionary rights to any church or citizen, or any exceptional rights or privileges inconsistent with national sovereignty or public safety.

THE TWO LEADERS.

Speeches were also delivered by the two leaders, Sir John Macdonald and Hon. Mr. Laurier, and for once both agreed. There was nothing remarkable about the utterances of the Premier, merely a justification of his act in not disallowing the bill. Mr. Laurier's speech was really a brilliant utterance, captivating the whole House and galleries. He made mention that never since confederation was there such an attendance in the galleries during the taking of a vote at so early an hour. Although much of the debate was on the supremacy of the Pope, that did not deter the singing of God Save the Queen as the curtain dropped, on the most remarkable debate that ever took place in Canadian Parliament. ONLOOKER.

WHISPERS OVER THE WIRES.

Accident—Stealing a Saw-Mill—Suicide of a Minister.

New York, April 8.—Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher, the venerable brother of the late Henry Ward Beecher, has sustained a serious mishap, which may result in his death. He is pastor of the Congregational church at Parkville.

He was at Parkville Tuesday evening, attending to some ministerial duty and returned to Brooklyn on the train. Although he is 85 years of age, Dr. Beecher is a man of remarkably fine physique and vigor, and spry as many men of half his age. When the train was slowly approaching the Bond Beecher jumped off the car. He slipped on the platform, and falling on the track one of the wheels passed over his leg, fracturing it. He was removed in an ambulance to a hospital. It is feared that the shock to his system resulting from the fracture may terminate fatally. The left foot was amputated.

Dr. Beecher is one of the oldest clergymen in the United States. He has been in the active ministry for more than fifty years.

Detour, Mich., April 8—Moiles Bros., lumbermen, owe Lard & Holstein, of Buffalo, $45,000, which will soon fall due. Not being prepared to meet it, they secretly collected a large gang of men, and are loading the mill and machinery on schooners, preparatory to taking the stuff to Spanish river, Canada, where a site for its erection has been secured. To prevent interference by the authorities, the telegraph wires have been cut.

London, April 8—Rev. Charles Sidney Hurd, lately of the Palmerston Unitarian chapel of Boston, committed suicide by taking opium on Sunday, April 1st. The week previous Hurd wrote to Rev. Stafford Brooke, asking for pecuniary assistance, which the latter promised. At the inquest to-day, a letter from Hurd to Brooke was read, which concludes: "The sole way by which I can escape my difficulties is through the gates of death. I am the most unlucky mortal on earth. Give my body to the medical school for dissection." The jury rendered a verdict of insanity. Brooke will not allow the body to be dissected, but will defray the expenses of burial.

Boston, April 8—The dispatch from London, announcing the suicide of Rev. Charles Sidney Hurd, of Palmerston chapel, Boston, probably refers to Rev. Charles Sumner Hurd, the Unitarian minister, formerly in charge of the Palmerston street chapel, in this city. This pastorate was concluded in 1888.

Aberdeen, Dak, April 4.—A terrible story of the destruction at Leola, the county seat of McPherson county, noted in last night's despatches, has been brought in by couriers. Leola was a town of 300 inhabitants, and the country for miles around was well settled with industrious and thrifty people. They say the surrounding country is nearly devastated. Hundreds of farm houses are in ashes, and the carcasses of burned stock are lying along the roadways. It is probable that one-tenth of the damage is not yet reported. The injured men, Old and Wardell, at last accounts were very low. Nothing definite is known about rebuilding. The citizens here will hold a meeting this afternoon to take measures for relief. Scores of farmers are without seed wheat, stock, buildings and implements to commence spring work.

ROME TO BLAME.

A Conservative Organ on the Cause of the Jesuit Agitation.

Quebec, April 6.—Le Canadien, the leading Conservative organ, has a double-headed editorial blaming the conduct of the papal authorities in regard to the Jesuit question, and concludes with the following: "If the Jesuit question had been prudently handled, if Rome had on this occasion shown the tact and ability which characterizes it, the storm which has assailed us for the last few days would not have occurred, and what result have the Jesuits obtained? Father Turgeon commenced by asking $900,000, half the real value of only one of the properties the Jesuits purchased, with their own money and finally accepts $400,000. The Holy See ratifies the arrangements and a fight takes place over again in Rome for the money, and the Jesuits receive $100,000. Why entrust the Jesuits to the detriment of the prestige of bishops to settle with the government if they only receive this mitre papal diplomacy in this instance has been changing, illogical and inconsequent. These vacillations in consequence of the contradictions created a bad effect in this country and we pray God such a spectacle never again be seen here."

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

Boulanger will Find an Asylum in England—Baseball Tourists.

[By Postal Telegraph.]

Paris, April 8.—The Mot Doidre asserts that General Boulanger has been ordered to quit Belgium. A banquet of the General's adherents was held at Rouen last night and the anti-Boulangist feelings of the city manifested itself in violent attacks upon those known to sympathize with the General, also upon the banqueters on leaving the hotel where they had gathered. The streets were filled with a riotous mob until midnight, when the police restored order. As far as is known no one was seriously injured, though several persons were roughly used while the disorder lasted.

BASEBALL TOURISTS.

New York, April 7.—W. G. Spaulding and the party of baseball players who left San Francisco last fall and who since travelled around the world, playing the national game in various countries, arrived this morning on the White Star steamer Adriatic in good health and spirits. The tug boat Laura M. Starr, in which were the reception committee and a number of other gentlemen, left Governor Island at 530 and steamed down to quarantine where she ran alongside the Adriatic. Accompanying the Starr was the tug Geo. Wood, which also carried a distinguished party. On the Wood was a brass band, which enlivened the party as they sailed down the bay. On running alongside the big steamer the whole party of travelled baseballists were seen amidships and being recognized were greeted with cheers which were responded to quickly by the passengers and crew of the Adriatic. As soon as the necessary permits were shown to the health officer the party of tourists were taken on board the Starr. Leigh Lynch, who is interested with Spaulding in the venture, was the first to leave the steamer. He was warmly welcomed by Chairman O'Donoughue as well as the others as they stepped down the gangway. Each player wore English made clothes, and carried an immense bundle of walking sticks as mementoes of the various places they passed through. Spaulding, as he stepped on the deck of the Starr, remarked: "Well, this is the pleasantest part of the whole trip." When the whole had embarked they steamed away amid renewed cheers of the crew and passengers of the Adriatic. They landed at the Twenty-Second street pier, from whence they were driven to the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Chicago, April 8.—The four rear coaches of the incoming train were thrown from the track yesterday by a defective switch, between Colcher and South Chicago. The cars were violently thrown against several oil-tank cars standing on side tracks, and were smashed to pieces. One man was killed and about twelve others were more or less seriously injured. The train, which consisted of three express cars, three emigrant cars, smoker, two passenger coaches, and Pullman sleeper, was running very fast at the time, as it was late and making up time. As the train was passing over a switch near the Standard Oil Co's. works, the seventh car suddenly derailed, and shot diagonally across the street, while a car just behind was thrown in the other direction against the oil tanks. The entire side of the car was smashed into a mass of iron and splinters. Both cars were filled with people, who shrieked with terror as they were dashed helplessly into the wreckage. The forward end of the Pullman car was stove in, while the rear car was derailed. The passengers in these cars merely suffered serious shaking up. Several received slight injuries.

A BOY WHITECHAPELLED.

Hamburg, April 8.—This city was startled to-day by the news of a revolting crime committed last night. A boy named Steinfatt, who was travelling over night on one of the many roads that lead to the suburbs of Hamburg was found murdered this morning and the corpse mutilated in a shocking manner. The throat was cut and the abdomen ripped and emptied of its contents. The boy's genital organs are also missing.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

Junction City, Ky., April 8.—Croft's saw-mill near this city was wrecked by a boiler explosion this morning. Chester Hughes, Jack Sheels, A. L. Hurley and Saml. Morris were killed.

THE FLAGSHIP SWIFTSURE

Soon to Arrive at Esquimalt—Her Officers—Incidents, Etc.

The battle-ship Swiftsure, the flagship of the British squadron in the Pacific, carrying the flag of Rear-Admiral Algernon C. F. Heneage, arrived at San Francisco on the 2nd inst., and after remaining there about ten days will proceed to Esquimalt. The Swiftsure was commissioned at Devonport, England, April 24, 1888, and sailed shortly afterward for this coast. She is a screw battle-ship of the second class, armored, carrying eighteen guns, is of 6910 tons register, with engines of 4910 horse-power.

Her officers are: Admiral, Algernon C. F. Heneage; Flag Lieutenant, Thomas U. Thynne; Secretary, Edward H. Banks; clerks to Secretary, Geo. C. Purches and Frederick Treglohan; Captain, James L. Hammet; Commander, Percy Hockin; Lieutenants—Hugh R. Evans, Edward Leah (navigating) Robert H. S. Stokes, Henry C. Kingsford (gunnery), Robert L. H. Armstrong (torpedo), and Hugh le D. Stapleton; Major of Marines, Robert A. D. Ramsay; Lieutenant R. M. A., John L. Homer; Chaplain and Naval Instructor, Rev. George H. Harwood, M. A.; Fleet Surgeon, Garland W. L. Harrison; Fleet Paymaster, Alexander W. Brett; Fleet Engineer, John G. Sampson; Sub-Lieutenant, Walter T. Rose; Surgeons—William S. Lightfoot, John E. Penn; Assistant Paymaster, Charles D. M. Parrent; Engineer, Walter Brown; Chief Carpenter, Samuel G. Sanders; Assistant Engineers—James T. Willoughby, Henry R. Teed, Alfred E. C. Deacon (supernumary); Gunners—John Mahoney (torpedo), Mark J. Delaney, John H. Weeks, (supernumary); Boatswains—Aaron Stevens, George J. J. Rendle (supernumerary); Midshipmen—William S. Lambert, Algernon W. Heneage, Henry C. Boyle, John A. Waugh, Henry E. Sharp, John D. Edwards, Henry Luxmoore, Godfrey G. Webster, Godfrey M. Paine, William A. S. Dobbs, Charles P. Beaty-Pownall, Murry F. Sneter; Naval Cadets—Robert W. F. Travers, H. B. Montague; Assistant Clerks—Reginald P. Walker, Allison B. Hall. She also has on board Staff Surgeon Michael Fitzgerald, Staff Engineer Edward Matthews, Boatswain Elias Lake and Carpenter Edward A. Kelynack, who will engage in service at Esquimalt.

A SICK ADMIRAL.

Admiral Heneage was unable to receive visitors when his ship arrived at San Francisco. He had been sick for three weeks, which was unwelcome news for the many friends he made there on a first visit a year ago.

THE SWIFTSURE'S ARMAMENT.

On the spar deck are four Nordenfeld six-pound quick firing stand guns. There are also two Gardner-Enfield five-barreled guns. They are handsomely finished and in front have a steel shield that can be thrown up to protect the man firing the gun. These Gardner guns are movable and can be placed on a boat or taken bodily out ashore and used as field guns. Forward of the guns mentioned is a steam picket boat; forty-eight feet long, carrying one three-pounder and one Gardner gun.

On either side the topgallant forecastle deck are powerful search lights operated by electricity, while in the center of the forecastle pointing forward are two three pound Hotchkiss guns.

On the upper deck, forward, under the topgallant forecastle are seen two four-inch breech-loading Armstrong guns, Vavasseur mountings. Next aft on either side is a five-barreled Gardner gun, similar to those on the spar deck. A few feet further aft are two four-inch Armstrong-Vavasseur guns, weighing 22 cwts. 3 qrs. 12 lbs. each.

The upper battery on the upper deck consists of four nine-inch twelve-tons, two on either side, and can be trained to fire right ahead, abeam and astern. There are also two four-barreled Nordenfeld guns.

The main battery is on the lower deck and consists of six muzzle-loading rifle guns, three on each side. They can be trained to fire in a distance of 35 degrees either side abeam. From them is fired a projectile weighing 250 pounds, which, in actual warfare, when fired at an object, can be carried 4500 yards.

Amidships, on the half-deck, are two torpedo guns. They can be trained to fire out of ports on either side, near where they are lashed; but before being run out it would be necessary to tear down the cabins on either side. This can be done in five minutes. The torpedoes are slung over-board on the half-deck. They are about 18 feet long and have a screw in one end, which is worked by compressed air.

On the quarter-deck are four breech-loading Armstrong guns with Vavasseur mountings. On the starboard side here is the Captain's cabin and on the port side the cabins of the navigating officer and the Admiral's Secretary. On the after-bridge are two four-barreled Nordenfeld guns, also a patent sounding machine, a signal stand and a semaphore.

On each side aft is a powerful electric search light, and right aft on each side a three-pound Hotchkiss gun with shield to protect the operator from musketry firing.

AT CALLAO.

Admiral Heneage, Flag Lieutenant Thynne and Secretary Banks were taken on board at Coquimbo. They had called at Honolulu, but could not get in the harbor on account of their deep draft of water, the Swiftsure drawing twenty-eight feet.

At Callo they attended a church festival, and the senoritas there took a vote as to who was the handsomest officer aboard. The votes were 10 cents each, the money going to the church. Major Ramsey of the Marines got the prize with 57 votes, Secretary Banks nearly tied him with 55, and Dr. Lightfoot obtained 83 votes.

ROCKIN'S HEROISM.

While the Swiftsure lay at Valparaiso she had out a spring made fast to a rock in the harbor. On Christmas day a boat containing seventeen persons came off to visit the ship. It caught on the spring, when about twenty yards from the ship, and the boat was thrown into the water. Three boats put off to the rescue and Commander Hockin gallantly jumped overboard in full uniform to endeavor to save life. All those in the boat were saved, with the exception of one young lady, who was drowned. A four-month-old baby was picked up insensible and afterward resuscitated by Dr. Lightfoot.

The Swiftsure has a fine military and string band of nineteen pieces on board. H. E. Loseley is the leader.

While in San Francisco the Golden Shore Market had the contract for supplying the ship with provisions. There are 620 people on board, all told, and the contract called for a daily supply of 35 sacks of potatoes, 1800 pounds of bread, 500 pounds of vegetables and 1000 pounds of fresh meat.

Died from Injuries—Real Estate—Fire on Lulu Island.

[Special to THE TIMES.]

New Westminster, April 8.—Subraunt Le Lemoen, of Surrey, died at St. Mary's Hospital on Friday from the effect of a wound received five weeks since by falling on a surveyor's stake. Deceased was 27 years of age and a native of Schleswig, Germany.

Real estate transactions are brisk. Scarcely a day passes but a number of sales are recorded of city property. On Friday Mr. Thos. Ovens disposed of the lot occupied by the American hotel and L. P. Bonson's saloon for a consideration of $12,000. Mr. Thos. J. Trapp purchased the lot on which his hardware store stands for $15,000.

The farmers in the delta flats are very dissatisfied with the unfavorable change that has taken place in the prospects for immediate construction of the proposed traffic bridge across the north channel of the Fraser river to connect the mainland with Sea and Lulu Islands. A petition is now in circulation asking the municipal council to negotiate an additional loan of $7500 for that purpose.

On Tuesday morning last, a store and other buildings occupied by a Chinaman named Eh Fung, situated on W. H. London's place on Lulu Island, accidently caught fire and before assistance could be rendered all was consumed. A number of Chinamen were sleeping in the buildings at the time, several of whom sustained severe injuries by the fire. One of the unfortunates has been taken to New Westminster and another to Victoria for medical treatment.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

A Case at Nanaimo Under the Old Act—A Probable Injustice.

An application was made at Nanaimo on Saturday, before Mr. Justice Crease, for a mandamus to compel the magistrates of this city to issue a license to the Palace Hotel, Skinner street. In support of the application it was contended by the applicant that of the eight justices of the peace on the license bench, four, viz: Messrs. S. M. Robins, H. Cooper, James Abrams, and J. P. Plante, were in favor of granting the license, and that of the four opposed to the granting of the license, three were not qualified to sit on a licensing bench, as they were interested in various saloon businesses in the city. Mr. J. Pawson is said to be interested in the Old Flag, and Mr. D. Smith in the Identical. Mr. A. Shaw was demurred against as he had signed the petition protesting against the issuance of any more licenses in the city. Mr. Eberts, who had opposed the application, contended as follows:

1. That the court held, was not a legally constituted court from the fact that the municipal council had never passed a bylaw to regulate the issuance of hotel and other licenses, and the bench would, therefore, have to be constituted under the Licensing Act, which only provided for courts to be held in June and December.

2. That the court that sat on March 15th ult. was not qualified, and all their proceedings were null and void.

3. That as the municipal council had failed to pass the necessary by-law the Municipalities Licensing Act was not in operation in Nanaimo, and that the licensing court could only be held in June or December.

His Lordship being requested to recommend that a special license be issued, remarked that he was very jealous of his rights as a judge, and as it was no part of his duty, he objected to interfere with Mayor Bate's right to issue a license or not, as he pleased.

THE LATE SESSION.

The Colonist, in its valedictory for the dissolved legislature, has the candor to designate the Municipalities Bill as a salutary measure, and a credit to the gentleman who framed it. For once we shall not take issue with our contemporary. The measure not only was a salutary one, but in the framing and putting together of so complex an instrument, the attention to details, and the industry required, stamp Mr. BEAVEN as the only competent law-giver in the House. All of the other measures of the House compared with the Municipalities Bill sink into insignificance. The importance of the Canadian Western Railway Bill can scarcely be over estimat as effecting the destinies of the Province and of Victoria, but as a mental effort it might have emanated from a Government street dude. No recalcitrant tax-payers to head off, no nice adjustments to make in the railway bill; it was all take, take, with just enough restrictions to give the Government the appearance of having business heads on them. Far be it from us to belabor the Government any harder than they deserve, and especially since the Colonist has been gracious enough to admit that some good can come out of Israel, but the fact is patent just the same that if the legislative enactments coming from the respective parties in the House there of the Government lose by comparison with those of the Opposition as the result of pure mental effort. We ask ourselves how it is, under such circumstances, that the brains of the House are in a hopeless minority? Why are the men who can, and do, legislate, and who can put their measures in such a lucid light that even the Government can understand them, playing second fiddle in the management of the affairs of State? Are the Government in the position of the widow who was neither young nor good looking, but who at the same time had a score of admirers? "I can't understand it," said the fellow thus commenting on the absence of her physical charms; "she must be possessed of virtues which only prescience can detect." Just so with the Government. It has no pronounced outward charms, and we must therefore attribute to its constituents the ability to detect some virtue beyond the ken of the eye of the Opposition. We fancy we hear the cry of "sour grapes." Well, cry away, but the virtues of the Opposition are visible without the aid of the microscope. The Opposition cannot be held responsible for the lawyer monopoly, nor the four inch tire act, both as mischievous as ever received the assent of a cumulate permitted to run at large without keepers. But the arrogance of the Government was best displayed in Mr. Oar's proposed amendment to the School Act, whereby it was proposed to abolish the daily marking system. Here was a measure inspired by the intelligence of the Province, based on experience and reinforced by agitation on the question in the States. We are prepared to concede that it was not a question for the House to legislate upon off hand, but it was a question which imperatively demanded of the Government a calm review and considerate treatment. Nothing of the kind was accorded it, however. The Government was petulant from the start, and finally sat down on the amendment as if it was the production of a Nihilistic organization. However, there is no need for us to pass the Government in review at further length. With the exception of the Western Railway bill, and one or two others of trifling importance, the remainder of its acts are luminous examples of cheap and immature legislation.

BOULANGER.

We had thought there was something in General BOULANGER. His flight from France, however, seems to confirm the oft-repeated remark that he is a charlatan, a carpet knight and an intriguer. The French seem capable of any extravagance, but in this last step of the Government to organize a court for the express purpose of dealing with Boulanger, it must know pretty near what it is about. It is all very well for BOULANGER to cry that he would not get a square deal in standing trial. The Bastile has disappeared from France. BOULANGER has been dabbling in matters inimical to the interests of the republic, and he knows it, and he prefers that they should not be ventilated. BOULANGER may be a man of brains, but he is not broad enough for a patriot. Patriotism in his case is made subservient to BOULANGER, and so with all of his alleged virtues he is only a conspirator. But if BOULANGER's presence in France was a source of danger, it is no less so with him out of it. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," and the result will be that his faction will deify him. The Government had better have let him alone. A Government that cannot stand on its own merits had better fall and the sooner the better.

MORTALITY IN BATTLE.

In the Franco-Prussian war the loss of the Germans was 3.1 per cent.; in the Crimean war the Allies lost 3.2 per cent.; in the Austrian war the loss was 2.6 per cent. In the American civil war the Union loss was 4.7 per cent. and that of the Confederates 9 per cent. There is a close parallel drawn between the battle of Waterloo and the battle of Gettysburg. "At Waterloo the French numbered 80,000 men and 252 guns; the Allies numbered 72,000 and 186 guns. At Gettysburg, the Union army numbered 82,000 men and 300 guns; the Confederates, 70,000 and 250 guns. At Waterloo, WELLINGTON's army lost 23,185; at Gettysburg, MEAD's army lost 23,003. The loss of the French at Waterloo has never been officially announced, but has been estimated at 26,300; the Confederate loss at Gettysburg, as officially reported by the Confederate surgeon-general, was 20,448, to which must be added 7,077 wounded and unwounded prisoners whose names were omitted from his lists, but appear on the records at Washington."

No one can question the desperate nature of the fighting of the war of the rebellion but collators of the mortuary statistics of American battle fields fall into a queer error in drawing a parallel between Gettysburg and Waterloo. The battle of Waterloo began at 10 a. m., and was practically over at 6 p. m., and during the interim over 49,000 men were placed hors de combat. Gettysburg battle extended over a period of three days and during that time only 43,000 men went down. PICKETT's charge at Gettysburg actually required, however, more courage than the assault of the French cavalry on the English squares, because the latter had the advantage of increased momentum and the exhilaration incident to it. History affords few parallels like Pickett's charge, but there was a sanguineness about the Napoleonic wars which has not been equalled in these latter days. Long range muskets and thin lines of battle are not favorable to the quick decision of field combats, although probably the nerve tension is greater than in the battles of the beginning of the century.

DECAY OF PRIZE FIGHTING.

What we mean by this is that the combats in the ring are no longer won by the best man. No doubt there are just as "good" men in the world to-day as there ever was; better, in fact. Since one hundred years past men have been better fed than ever before, and men like cattle thrive on good diet. Nor if there any reason for believing that the pugnacious instinct has abated. The difference between the past and the present in regard to pugnacity is that it is under better control than formerly, taking the people as a class. The pugnacious instinct will never die so long as the fighter can command admirers and so long as newspapers will take the trouble to report their actions. There is a kind of pugnacity, however, which newspapers should not report, nor the police fail to mercilessly squelch, and those are the pugilistic fiascos such as the Weir-Murphy battle in Chicago. In this fisticuff there were 82 rounds fought, 20 on a scientific basis, 62 a mere travesty, or hardly that, inasmuch as the principals scarcely "put their hands up." The explanation lies in the fact, says the Examiner, that the "Spiders" hands went back on him. It is just possible that such was the case, but as his opponent failed to take advantage of the circumstance the fight in the end being declared a draw, and the gate money $1500 divided between them, the whole thing has the appearances of a job. We have no pity for their dupes who paid to see the fiasco, but since prize fighting is against the law and swindling too, the parties should be indicted on both counts, and sent to jail for twelve months. Prize fighting is brutal, but such is the world's admiration for pugnacity that never more than nominal punishment is inflicted, but when a pair of rounders conspire to hammer each other for the gate receipts, the law should interfere, and treat the principals as swindlers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The editor of the Vancouver World appears to have developed into a full fledged anti-Victoria crank. He berates Mr. Mara for taking an interest in the Victoria immigration agent, advocates the removal of that official altogether and concludes that it is 'not improbable this reform will be inaugurated at an early day." The addition to the insane asylum, if we are to judge from some of our mainland contemporaries, was badly needed.

A Common Cold

Is often the beginning of serious affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold or Cough.

Last January I was attacked with a severe Cold, which, by neglect and frequent exposures, became worse, finally settling on my lungs. A terrible cough soon followed, accompanied by pains in the chest, from which I suffered intensely. After trying various remedies, without obtaining relief, I commenced taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Cold, which settled on my Lungs. I consulted various physicians, and took the medicines they prescribed, but received only temporary relief. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking two bottles of this medicine I was cured. Since then I have given the Pectoral to my children, and consider it

Some time ago I took a slight Cold, which, being neglected, grew worse, and settled on my Lungs. I had a hacking cough, and was very weak. Those who knew me best considered my life to be in great danger. I continued to suffer until I commenced using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Less than one bottle of this valuable medicine cured me, and I feel that I owe the preservation of my life to its curative powers.—Mrs. Ann Lockwood, Akron, New York.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is considered, here, the one great remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs, and is more in demand than any other medicine of its class.—J. F. Roberts, Magnolia, Ark. ††

CHAPTER VIII.

WORKING UP INTEREST.

Miss Earle opened her eyes to their fullest extent in her astonishment at Sarah Leslie's greeting to her young brother. "Oh, have you met Stuart?" she said.

"Stuart?" Miss Leslie laughed, "No, I know no Stuart, but I know the shameless boy they used to call 'Tommy,' at Brighton, last autumn. Do you know that boy," she went on, in teasing tones, "that boy walked about with me for a whole week, and then when little Violet, who was just 16, joined us, he quietly jilted me for her."

"Oh, Miss Leslie!" cried the object of their attack, "there was a long brute of a Guardsman, and you never so much as cast a glance my way after he came. What was the good of hanging after you while he was to the front? So I just slipped into the background, and, thinks I, I'll let them get comfortably married, and then perhaps there'll be a chance for me.'"

There must have been some shade of truth in this assertion, for Miss Leslie flushed up in a very guilty way, though she made believe that his desertion had cut her to the heart.

Nancy Earle was only too delighted to see her boy had met friends who were pleasant and glad to see him. She watched him proudly, as he stood in the midst of the handsome Leslie girls, shaking hands and exchanging boisterous greeting with every one of them. She was quite content to be passed over with just a careless touch of his cheek against hers, and to wait until it should suit his lordly pleasure to give her the last details of her father's welfare.

How proud she was of him too, the handsome, smooth faced lad, who was the last of the Earles—the last to count, that is. She had been well drilled in her family duty, and honestly thought herself far inferior to him in every way, and of infinitely less importance; for he was a boy, you know, a lord of creation, and she was—well, in her own estimation, nothing, as far as the family tree was concerned.

He was a handsome lad, very much like her sister, but with much more importance of manner, and none of her sweet shy ways. Not for a moment did it occur to him to study any wishes save his own, and as soon as he had spoken to Lady Margaret and the lovely Aileen, who was not one of his divinities, he went off with the Leslies without troubling to give his sister another word.

Lady Margaret had noticed it all, trust her for that, and she said sharply enough to Aileen: "Young Earle does not seem to have anything to say to his sister."

"Why, the way he's been talking up," answered Aileen—as if a boy, and the last of the Earles, had a prescriptive right to lord it over his sister, who is only a woman, a sort of excrescence which the family tree would, if anything, be rather better without.

However, as Nancy herself seemed thoroughly delighted by the simple knowledge that her dear boy was within reach of her, it was no use for either Lady Margaret or Aileen to worry about it. As a matter of fact, they very soon had some thing else to do; for just then Lord and Lady Mallinbro' arrived, accompanied by a houseful of guests, and Lord Cardella, looking as moody and miserable as only a man with a settled trouble over can look; and the ceremony of declaring the bazaar open began.

Lord Mallinbro' made the shortest and most appropriate speech that could be wished, and immediately afterward went with Lady Mallinbro' on a round of the chalet and other attractions of the place.

"Polly," said Mrs. Antrobus, in a loud whisper, "have you seen Lord Cardella?"

"Yes, mother." Polly answered.

"Did he speak to you?"

"No; I've not seen him speak to any one yet."

"I think the least he can do is to introduce us to his father and mother," said Mrs. Antrobus, with dignity. "If he comes to speak to me I shall tell him so."

"As you please, mother," said Polly.

Polly was not a good saleswoman, and was not as yet doing good business; if the truth be told, indeed, she utterly loathed the whole business, and was in hourly, at least momentary, dread of her future husband's arrival.

"Is Monty coming" asked Mrs. Antrobus, who had no aversion or such like feelings to fight against, and was looking eagerly forward to waddling round the various stalls with her son-in-law to be, covering herself with honor and glory out of his fat purse.

"I believe so," said Polly, assuming an indifference she was far from feeling.

"Did he promise to come" persisted her mother.

"He said he would come," returned Polly.

"I hope he will—your clasps and ornaments are lovely," her mother whispered. "I have seen nothing like them so far. Really, it was most lavish of Monty to send to Switzerland for them after all the costly presents he had given you."

Polly gave a glance at her great silver clasps and ornaments, such of them as were visible, that is; but she did not answer. Truth to tell, she liked the clasps well enough, for in themselves they were lovely. But after Eliot Cardella and Lord Cardella, his brother, whom she had seen a few moments ago looking the very picture of misery, and after Lord Charterhouse, whom each moment she expected with dread to see, it was impossible to be particularly enthusiastic about the appearance of a Moses, or, as Mrs. Antrobus euphoniously and with affectionate familiarity called him, Monty Mandarin.

But there is a proverb founded on the probability of bad shillings turning up again, and, sure enough, Mr. Mandarin put in an appearance very soon after the opening ceremony was brought to a close. He made his way quickly to the stall at which Polly was helping, reaching it, in fact, just as Lady Charterhouse, followed by the unhappy "Mr. Winks," approached it from the other side.

"Oh, that is pretty!" exclaimed Lady Charterhouse, stopping to admire a pretty carved whip stand which graced the stall.

"How much is it?" addressing herself to Polly, with undisguised admiration for her beauty. "Thirty shillings. Oh! I'll have that. Pay up, Charterhouse, please."

Thus bidden publicly, the unfortunate "Mr. Winks" had no choice but to go forward and doff his hat to Polly. At the same moment Mrs. Antrobus bore down upon them from behind, and greeted Lady Charterhouse with affectionate effusiveness. "And I must introduce my daughter," she said, indicating Polly, who would willingly have died at that moment if by so doing she could have escaped the ordeal through which she had to pass.

She tried hard to turn Lady Charterhouse's attention upon a pipe rack exactly matching the whip stand, hoping by so doing to convey to her mother that she need not introduce Mr. Mandarin to anybody. But Mrs. Antrobus was much too proud of her wealthy son-in-law elect not to make all the display she could of him; so before Lady Charterhouse could turn to look at the pipe rack she had done the deed.

She had done the deed.

In spite of her confusion and misery, Polly involuntarily looked at "Mr. Winks," who was looking at the odd German Jew and John Chinaman with unconcealed horror; then he looked at Polly, and saw that ere her eyes fell before his gaze they were filled with tears.

It was a miserable moment. Lady Charterhouse declined the pipe rack, and with a pleasant word passed on. But as soon as they got out of earshot, she turned to him eagerly. "Charterhouse," she said, "is that girl going to marry that monster?"

"I suppose so," returned "Mr. Winks," staring straight in front of him, and saying nothing.

"Good heavens!" cried his wife. "What a poor lot the men here must be to stand it."

Poor little "Mr. Winks" heart gave a great sick throb, and his wife gabbled on.

"She is lovely, perfectly lovely. Did you know her pretty well?"

"Pretty well," he answered, woodenly.

"Well, I can't understand it. Did you know her before you got engaged to me?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, I tell you frankly, I can't think how in the world you came to think of me, when you might have married her, and to let that little monster"——

"That little monster is a new acquisition," said "Winks," with a ghastly effort to be facetious.

"It's a sin," declared his wife, with conviction.

Of course, she had not understood; but there was other eyes upon the stall just then, who not only saw but understood precisely what had happened. They belonged to the Leslies, whose stall was in the next chalet, and who were all hovering about outside it, the better to waylay any likely looking purchasers who might be passing along the street.

It happened that Beautiful Jim, who had come in about the same time as Mr. Mandarin, was brought to the Leslies' chalet just then by Nancy Earle, that he might make young Stuart's acquaintance, and he, too, saw more than Lady Charterhouse had done.

Nor was that all he saw, for just as Miss Earle pointed out her brother to him, that gay young gentleman was very busily engaged in fixing up a heavy plait of Violet Leslie's hair, which had escaped its pins.

"H'm—plenty of cheek," said Beautiful Jim to himself.

Miss Earle waited until the plait of hair had been properly fixed in its place, and then she went forward and intimated to her brother that one of the officers of his regiment was waiting to be introduced to him.

"Ah! How-de-do!" said Tommy, with perfect composure and a hail fellow well met style, such as would have done credit to a general just appointed to command the district, and to whom it would have been much more suitable than it was to him, a not yet joined subaltern.

They stood a few minutes making conversation, and parted with relief on both sides, for Beautiful Jim was in that frame of mind which found everything but Nancy Earle flat, stale and unprofitable.

Nor did he at any time particularly affect the society of youngsters; and in this instance he set down "Tommy Earle," (as he was called in the regiment from that day) as "an impudent young devil, who wanted licking into shape and his cheek knocked out of him."

Nor had Tommy any desire to stay. There were five bright and pretty girls close at hand, with whom he was on the best of terms, and he felt that he would like Mr. Beresford better in his proper place, that is, at the mess table or in the barrack yard.

"What do you think of him?" inquired Miss Earle, eagerly.

"He is rather like you," returned Beautiful Jim, in a tone which conveyed that if Tommy had been more like his sister he would have been more to his liking.

"Oh, he is far better looking than I," she cried—at which Jim laughed outright, and she protested further. "He is more of an Earle, you know. I am more like my mother's family."

"That is lucky for you," said Beautiful Jim, gravely.

Miss Earle chose to pass this compliment over without apparently noticing it.

"Do you think he will make a good soldier, Mr. Beresford?"

Beautiful Jim laughed. "It is impossible to say," he answered. "I could better answer your question next year this time."

"Next year this time! Oh, we don't know what may happen in a year," she said, quickly. "They tell me that Stuart will have a terrible time at first among the other officers."

"I dare say he may find the first few months pretty rough," answered Jim, composedly.

"But what will they do to him?" she asked, anxiously.

"They'll try his temper a good bit," Jim replied.

"Oh, Mr. Beresford," she exclaimed. "I don't know how he will stand it—he has such a hasty temper."

"He must have had a pretty fair test of his temper already at Sandhurst," said Jim.

"Well—I believe it was an awful stumbling block to him," Miss Earle admitted; "and if I only knew that some one was looking after him it would be such a relief to my mind—I can't tell you what a relief. And he is such a dear boy—quite the dearest boy I ever know."

"I am sure he is," said Beautiful Jim, telling the lie boldly and promptly. "And, of course, if it will make you feel more comfortable, Miss Earle, I will keep an eye upon him; only—if you want to make a first rate soldier out of him, you must let things take their natural course."

But Nancy Earle, caring more in her stedfast and simple mind of the personal comfort and welfare of her precious boy, "the last of the Earles," than for the advancement of his qualities as a soldier, did not heed the advice. In truth, she scarcely understood it, and certainly did not realize sufficiently how valuable it was. To her, a first rate soldier meant one who would dash proudly on through fire and smoke, who would storm a battery single handed, and, if need be, die with a proud smile upon his lips. That was Nancy Earle's idea of a first rate soldier; but to Beautiful Jim, who loved his profession as his life, though he could grumble with the best at an extra field day or at a court martial, and hated an inspection like poison, a first rate soldier was something very different. It meant somebody who would learn to obey before he should attempt to rule, one who would follow as well as lead, one who had learned patience and forbearance, and the value of that greatness which consists in ruling his own spirit. It meant, in truth, a good deal less dash and a good deal more sound, plain, common sense.

However, Nancy Earle did not know all this, and Beautiful Jim was either too weak or had not the heart to tell her; so she got him to promise that he would be a sort of fairy—or at least a regimental—godfather to young Stuart, and try to keep him out of harm's way.

Pleasant task!

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN'S
Histogenetic System,
—THE—
Entire Revolution of Medicine!

TESTIMONIALS.

Victoria, B. C., January 25th 1889.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN:

Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in testifying to the virtues of your medicines. I was paralyzed from the hips down: could not stand on my limbs without support, was induced to try your medicines: in six weeks could walk and was perfectly strong again, after using the medicine two months; it is four months since I stopped the medicine and no sign of the trouble returning.

A. B. OLDERSHAW.

Victoria, B. C., 25th January 1889.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN:

Dear Sir—I have very great pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficiency of your medicines. I was taken down with Rheumatic fever early in the spring which never seemed to entirely leave me, along in the summer my joints became so stiff and I was so crippled with Rheumatism that I could not walk without the help of a cane. I suffered very much pain whenever I attempt to move. I tried your medicine which cured me in a few weeks; I am now able to work and do not hesitate to recommend your medicine to the public, in my opinion there is nothing like them to cure Rheumatism.

WM. TRUESDAL.

Victoria, B. C., 18th February 1889.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN M. D.

Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicine. I was suffering severely from an attack of Quinsy, a friend of mine recommended your medicine, which I began using, and in a few hours the pain was gone. I can recommend Histogenetic medicines as a specific in that complaint.

JAMES KNOX, SS. Islander.

Victoria, September 27th, 1888.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN.

Dear Sir—As I am about to leave the country I think it is my duty to you and the public that I should thank your agent, Mr. Dunlevey, for introducing your medicine to me. I have long very bad for five years with rheumatism and paralysis; I tried everything but got no relief until I tried your medicine, in it I found great relief, so much so that I will take a supply with me, and when out I will send for more. Sir, I remain yours, —A prominent Northern Pacific official states that the running time between St. Paul and the Sound will be still further reduced. From Spokane Falls west, the saving in time will be 12 hours, and one whole day between St. Paul and Tacoma. The Sound traffic is assuming such vast proportions, that this step is imperative to meet the cut of $5 made by the C. P. R. in through rates from Chicago and other eastern common points.

—Mr. F. Stimson, of the Northwest Cattle Company, informs the Calgary paper, that Mr. VanValkenburg, the meat king, who so recently came to Alberta for a train load of beef cattle, has written him that the cattle turned out remarkably well, and he has sent for another train load. Robbins admitted having been in jail in Oregon on a charge of incest, but the case was thrown out of court. The magistrate in the present case decided to dismiss the charge.

New Sealer.

A schooner of about 65 tons burthen arrived in Esquimalt at five o'clock last evening, after a voyage of 34 days from Yokohama. She is under command of Capt. McKell, formerly of the Batavia, and will be employed in the sealing business.

Died at the Hospital.

Bearing the Park.

A young black bear was taken to Beacon Hill to-day by Ald. Goodacre. Bruin will be chained to a tree in the park. When the animal grows up he will break loose and will feed on Ald. Styles' gold fish.

Utilizing Water Power.

Dr. Ernest B. Hainsington has made application to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works for permission to register 500 inches of water from Millstream, Highland district, for irrigation, mechanical and manufacturing purposes.

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Printers' Ink.

By the City of Puebla arriving last evening was a consignment of printing material in care of Palmer & Rey, for Nanaimo. It consisted of several presses and twenty-three cases. Evidently some body is embarking extensively in the "art preservative" in the city of black diamonds.

Quite Right.

Mr. Varney Gaskell, Secretary of the State Railroad Commission of California, has returned to San Francisco from a trip north as far as this city. Mr. Gaskell is enthusiastic in his description of the overland trip to Tacoma and the voyage on the Sound to Victoria. He contends that there is nothing in America to surpass it.

A Collier's Mishap.

The collier San Mateo, from Departure Bay, with 4,200 tons of coal on board, arrived at San Francisco last Wednesday. A strong ebb tide was running as she attempted to make her berth. She got caught by the current and narrowly escaped colliding with the steamer Hume. However, she struck the wharf, damaging it to the extent of $700.

Marriages.

On Saturday evening, W. H. Cregan was married to Miss Minnie Parker, daughter of John Parker, of Craigflower. The happy couple were united by Rev. J. W. Wadhams, of the Gorge Road church. THE TIMES extends congratulations.

Mr. Driscoll, an employee of the Albion Iron Works Company, and Miss Bray were married on Saturday evening.

Skipped.

A man named DeCandia, renting a store in the Clarence block, has been missing for a week. On Saturday, March 30th, he left this city for Nanaimo. A young man was left in charge of the store and nothing has been heard of DeCandia since. The Sheriff took possession of the premises last Friday. The principal creditors are N. Buttocio, $1500 and C. Geiselman, $400. DeCandia owed $4000 in this city and leaves a stock valued at $1000.

More Quartz.

It is reported, says the Courier, that some fine silver and copper bearing quartz has been found on one of the islands in the neighborhood of Saymour Narrows. However, nowadays every rock that is exposed to the surface is prospected in order to see whether it contains any of the precious metals or not. But one thing is certain, and that is, that there is an abundance of low grade quartz on Vancouver island and adjacent islands of the gulf.

Retiring from Business.

Mr. Arthur Bullock, one of Nanaimo's solid business men, says the Courier, has announced his intention of retiring from active business life. He has been one of the fortunate ones and has prospered, and all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance and friendship while sorry to lose him from the arena of active business life, will wish him the future prosperity and happiness which he deserves. Mr. Bullock will in the near future dispose of his dry goods business, and will travel for some time in Europe.

Absconding Book-Keeper.

Two detectives arrived in this city on Saturday evening in search of Martin Cravens, a book-keeper of the Los Angeles planing mill, who embezzled $3,000 on March 9th. He was arrested in Seattle, but was released, and left for British Columbia. He was located in a prominent hotel in this city some days ago by a local private detective, but escaped before he was properly identified. The detectives and police are searching this city for the man who, if found, will be arrested for bringing stolen money into Canada.

New Hotel for Winnipeg.

It is officially stated that the Manitoba & Northern Pacific Railway Company has decided to build, this year, a handsome hotel and terminal passenger station combined, on the property it owns, fronting on Upper Main street in Winnipeg. The hotel will be five storeys high, with all modern improvements, and will be of handsome and imposing architectural design. President Oakes has stated that it will cost $200,000. If the advantages offered for a similar hotel in Victoria were pointed out to the Northern company they would very likely build here.

Funeral of Sister Mary Prosper.

The remains of Sister Mary Prosper were consigned to their last resting place in the grounds adjoining St. Ann's Convent. This morning requiem high mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop Lemmens, assisted by Fathers Mandart, Nicolaye, Donkele and Laterne. Father VanNevel was master of ceremonies. A large number of the congregation of St. Andrew's pro-Cathedral were present with the Sisters of St. Ann's and the children attending the Convent. The pall-bearers were E. A. McQuade, D. Mills, C. Gabriel, M. Baily, T. J. Burnes and N. Portman.

Commercial Notes.

Imports from California are large and on the increase. For the first two months of the present year an increase, over the same period last year, is shown, amounting to $6,550.

Shipments from San Francisco via the P. C. S. S. Co. and the C. P. R. are also of increasing magnitude. These consist largely of wool, dried fruits, beans, wines, borax and brandy for New York, Boston and Chicago.

The new tea crop from the Orient will begin to arrive during May.

There arrived from Montreal last evening via the C. P. R., eight tons of sugar for local firms.

A large consignment of celebrated Bain wagons from Woodstock came down on the Islander last evening.

A Gaelic Sermon.

It has been arranged that the Rev. D. Fraser, of the First Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Mr. Miller, of Nanaimo, will exchange pulpits on Sunday next. A large number of the miners of Wellington and Nanaimo are descendants of the Highland families of Cape Breton and other parts of Nova Scotia where they were accustomed to hear the living word preached in the good old Gaelic language as regularly as it they had lived in the highlands of Scotland. It was always claimed by their fathers that the Gaelic was more expressive than English, and that as a consequence they always felt better after a sermon in that language than when the same things were spoken to them in the tongue of the Saxon. It is natural that the children should retain a veneration for that which was so much admired by their parents. Mr. Fraser, therefore, in compliance with a request will preach in Gaelic at Wellington on Sunday next.

JOHN BRIGHT.

Eloquent Reference to the Great Liberal by Rev. Mr. McLeod.

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday, the text was taken from the third epistle of John, 11th and 12th verses: "Beloved, follow not that which is evil but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God; but he that doeth evil hath not seen God. Demetrius hath good report of all men and of the truth itself: Yea and we all bear record; and ye know that our record is true." The preacher said that there was here the enunciation of a great principle and the application of it to the character and life of Demetrius. He wished to call their attention to the principle laid down in the text, and to apply it to the character and who had so recently gone to rest and his reward, and of whom it might be said that he hath a good report of all men and of the truth itself. The principle laid down in the text is forgotten in our day and therefore we expect to make mistakes in our judgments of eminent men. We make the mistake, for instance, of separating the man from his life work, as though his personal character was of no consequence as long as his ability was conspicuous or his achievements great. God's ideal of greatness lies in character, ours in talent or success, so we are ever prone to condone the faults or even crimes of the great as though genius placed them above the requirements of

THE MORAL LAW.

Again, we do not consider goodness in itself essential. A man who is determined to follow good in our day is sure to be troublesome. We prefer such a mixture of good and evil as will command the market and keep matters pleasant all round. Hence we ask what is expedient, what is prudent, what will help us or our party, rather than the simple question, what is good? Further, we fail to recognise the connection between goodness and Godliness, and imagine it possible for men to be good, to live noble lives apart from God and without faith in God. The noblest of the heathen were seekers after God, and the highest ideal since Christ came into the world has only been reached under

THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS.

Now, in John Bright we have all the elements that make the true hero. His life and works are the natural outcome of his personal character. "Out of the abundance of his heart his mouth speaks." He had deep convictions, and he lived them out, so that in speaking of him we have no need to gloss over inconsistencies or hide moral defects. He was a true man and his life was the best proof of his greatness of soul. The tree was good, and so the fruit was good. In John Bright we see a man who was determined to follow the good at all costs, and therefore he often found himself almost alone in struggling for truth and righteousness, but it was a matter of no importance to him whether the cause he advocated was popular or not, the only question was

and when he was satisfied on that ground he put the whole weight of his convictions in the speeches that thrilled all who heard them as though they were the words of one inspired. His political career began most touchingly in a compact between himself and Cobden, which he has himself described: "I was in Leamington, and Mr. Cobden called on me. I was then in the depths of grief—I may almost say despair, for the light and sunshine of my house had been extinguished. All that was left on earth of my young wife, except the memory of a sainted life and a too brief happiness, was lying still and cold in the chamber above us. Mr. Cobden called on me as his friend and addressed me, as you may suppose, with words of condolence. After a time he looked up and said: 'There are thousands and thousands of homes in England at this moment where wives and mothers and children are dying of hunger. Now when the first paroxysm of your grief is passed, I would advise you to come with me, and we will never rest until the Corn Laws are repealed.'" We cannot be surprised that should follow from such a covenant, and it is a matter of history that these two men convinced the House of Commons and the nation and achieved the great victory of free trade, which really saved the starving millions of the people and prepared the way for the commercial supremacy which Great Britain has since attained. But John Bright has never been ashamed to acknowledge himself a humble follower of Jesus Christ. He has ever been a consistent member of the Society of Friends, a sect which has been much despised, but which has exerted an influence far wider than many more pretentious bodies. They were the first to understand and preach religious toleration, and their simple faith and consistant lives have made them a mighty both in the old world and the new. Justin McCarthy says John Bright was a man of two books, the Bible and John Milton, and that his eloquence was evidently moulded by the former, rather than the latter. Now, what has been the outcome of John Bright's career. At first he was persecuted and derided as a rebel and republican. By-and-by the great causes he had at heart triumphed, so that Gladstone, in his eulogy, says he was taken away at a happy time, when he had seen the triumph of all the great principles for which he contended. He has passed away amid the world's plaudits, anticipating the welcome that awaits him in the better country, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

POWER FOR GOOD,

STUFFED PHEASANTS.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Play a Joke on a Constable.

Several weeks ago a number of sportsmen were summoned to appear in the Provincial Court on a charge of assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty. The trouble arose from the parties declining to allow the constable to search their wagon for contraband game. The witnesses on both sides disagreed and the case was finally dismissed by the magistrate. On the following morning, bright and early, a number of the city hunters, including the defendants in the case, were seen on the Saanich road with guns and dogs. Information was sent to the constables on the previous night that a grand hunt would be held at which every living thing on four legs or supplied with wings would be slaughtered. On the arrival of the party at the Royal Oak the wagon was stopped and the hunt commenced. Two or three of Mr. Camp's chickens were shot and promiscuous shooting was indulged in to awaken the constable, who lives further along the Saanich road. During the shooting one of the party's side whiskers were singed, and the party struck up the familiar song, "When the 'Robins' Nest Again." After a short time passed in this manner the look-out reported that the constable was coming up the road smoking a short clay pipe. The fun immediately commenced. In an adjoining field the party planted three stuffed pheasants. They crossed the road and commenced blazing away at them in great shape. The three principals fired five or six shots into the pheasants and picked them up. Returning from the field they espied their enemy sitting quietly on the fence. Each hunter was followed by a dog and carried his gun over his shoulder with a "six months" dead pheasant in his hand. They approached the silent guardian and climbed the fence within a few feet of him; but he didn't move. He sat there peacefully smoking his little old clay pipe. The only motion he made was to wink at the dogs. The party returned to the Royal Oak and threw the stuffed birds in the wagon. They stayed around for an hour or two; but the constable kept his position on the fence and remained there until the disgusted party started for town. He then came down from his perch and rolled on the ground. The woods resounded with laughter and the only button on his vest went flying towards the tree tops. A fishing party found him bowed up against a tree and after considerable difficulty they heard the story in detail with the addenda that a friend of the constable sold the stuffed birds to the party the night before and advised them to play the joke on the "green" constable. The party selling the birds then took a buggy and went out to inform him of the parties coming in the morning. They were out one day's wages, the hire of an express wagon, $5 each for three stuffed pheasants, powder and shot and the price of innumerable smiles; but the disappointment of not being under arrest was the worst part of the whole proceeding.

Marriage at Kamloops—Horses for Nanaimo, Etc.

From the Inland Sentinel.]

Wm. Fortune has taken a carload of horses to Nanaimo. Amongst the number was a bay mare from the celebrated running stock bred by Arch. McConnell, Kamloops. This animal will give a good account of herself when she tests her speed with the high steppers of the city of black diamonds.

Mr. G. A. White, of Langley, is installed as bookkeeper for the Shuswap Milling Co., Kamloops, in the room of Mr. D. W. Gillies, resigned.

A public meeting to arrange for the organization of fire brigades in Kamloops will be held in the old court house on Wednesday evening next.

Mr. J. D. Ross, architect and builder, and Miss L. Brown, sister of Mr. J. L. Brown, merchant, were married at Kamloops on Wednesday evening last. The knot was tied by Rev. J. Chisholm, B. A. Mr. P. S. Renier acted as groomsman, and Miss M. Edwards assisted the bride. The bride was very neatly attired in a cream lace skirt, with a pale blue satin basque, the bridal veil being of white tulle held in position by a bunch of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was attired in the same manner minus the veil, her basque being of a delicate pink. The bride was supported to the altar by her brother, Mrs. M. Gordon playing the stirring strains of the wedding march on the church organ. After the ceremony a few invited friends joined Mr. and Mrs. Ross at the manse, where a very inviting repast was served.

Mr. M. Sullivan, whose sale of a ranche and stock to J. T. Edwards we noticed a short time ago, has retired from active employment, and now resides at Shuswap where he had reserved for his own use on a leased property a house and two acres of ground.

Lew Campbell sold a span of horses to R. E. Lemon on Thursday for $350. The horses will be used on the construction of the Westminster & Southern Railway, Mr. Lemon having a joint contract on a part on of that road.

Henry Abbott, general superintendent of the C. P. R., intends having erected a winter residence at Kamloops.

Mr. D. W. Gillies, late bookkeeper for the Shuswap Milling Co., Kamloops, having announced his intention of leaving on Wednesday night, the members of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society, of which Mr. Gillies was an active member and office bearer, decided to give him a worthy send-off. With that object in view some twenty or more members met at the Arlington house, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared for the occasion. During the course of the dinner Mr. Gillies was presented with a handsome gold pen and case. Mr. G. takes the position of bookkeeper for VanVolkenburgh & Co. at Vancouver.

Narrow Escape.

About 2 o'clock this afternoon the team hitched to Gowen & Son's beef wagon took fright on Wharf street, and started at a great speed up Johnson street. Mr. Geo. Gowen, who was driving, fell from the seat and a hind wheel passed over his lower limbs, severely bruising them. The fore wheel on the right had previously come off, thus luckily saving him from extra torture. At the junction of Cormorant street an obstruction was struck, upsetting the wagon. The horses then broke loose and tore up Johnson street until stopped. When it is considered that the heavy wagon contained five heavy kegs of beer, the weight passing over the young man's limbs was considerable. Outside of a severe bruise he escaped unhurt.
